

TAFT SLIPS INTO CITY TO ADDRESS SOUTHERNERS

Will Tell Young Men Not to Vote Democratic Ticket Because Fathers Did.

NO CROWD GREET'S HIM.

Goes Back to Washington Tomorrow to Put in a Busy Week.

President-elect Taft came quietly into this city at 1 o'clock this afternoon and slipped up to the home of his brother, Henry W. Taft, at No. 26 West Forty-eighth street, where he will remain until he goes to attend the banquet of the North Carolina Society at the Hotel Astor to-night.

Mr. Taft, accompanied by his private secretary, Frederick W. Carpenter and two stenographers, arrived at the Jersey City train shed of the Pennsylvania Railroad at 12:30. He failed to shake hands with the engine driver or any of the train crew, quietly greeted his brother who had come to meet him and walked swiftly down the platform to the elevator that descends to the basement. Not half a dozen persons in the great train shed recognized Mr. Taft, nor did the few who recognized him attempt any demonstration.

Only One Guard With Him.

A limousine automobile was waiting for Mr. Taft and his party, and he leaved his great bulk into it and was driven aboard a Twenty-third street ferryboat. Only one secret service man had accompanied the President-elect, and he remained unobtrusively in the background. Two secret service men were sent over to Jersey City by Superintendent Flynn, who joined the lone sleuth from Washington and accompanied him to this city.

From the preceding shelter of the big automobile Mr. Taft talked to reporters during the trip across the river. He said that he had prepared his speech for tonight's dinner on his way north from Hot Springs, Va. He had been accompanied by Mrs. Taft to Washington, where she stopped to visit friends.

Opposed to Tradition.

The President-elect said that tonight's speech—practically his first public address since election—will contain no startling features. The text of it will be to point out to the young Southerner the wisdom of adhering to strictly to time-worn traditions and voting the Democratic ticket simply because their father's did.

Mr. Taft said that he never attained his just position and fall in line with Northern progress until the younger generation learns to think for itself.

Asked if he had observed the controversy that has arisen between President Roosevelt and William Taft, Mr. Taft's round countenance burst into a rosy smile and he laughed heartily.

Shy of Controversies.

"There, there, now," he said, "you can't draw me into any controversies."

The President-elect said that he would leave New York tomorrow morning and go at once to Washington. There he will be very busy for the remainder of the week. He will attend the Governor's Club dinner, a Conservation Congress of Governors and address a meeting of the Red Cross Society. Also he will confer with Speaker Cannon over the programme for coming legislation. He said that he thought that he and Mr. Cannon would reach a harmonious agreement.

Arriving in this city, the Taft automobile sped away swiftly from the ferryhouse. No one on the ferryboat had recognized the distinguished occupant of the car, nor was he recognized when the boat arrived at her slip.

ROOSEVELT AND HEARST.

W. S. Whittinghill, of Enid, Okla., who stepped aside in favor of Senator Gore when his State picked her first United States Senator, was a passenger on the Arabic, which arrived today from Liverpool.

"President Roosevelt and William Randolph Hearst," he said, "are looked upon by many I have met abroad as men very much alike as to character and to statements they are likely to make. Both made the same Standard Oil allegations against Gus Baskett, of my State, and both made the accusation without the slightest legal evidence for a foundation."
